YOUR WEEK

Of Whom Should We Expect the Most

Big Jim was, unabashedly, a bum. Not having eaten since noon the day before, the instinctual elements of his mind were whetted to a razor sharpness by the emptiness of his rather over-sized stomach, and he instantly calculated and concluded that the wind-blown sign directly in front of him, reading "Starbright Mission" meant in reality FREE MEAL. So, Big Jim the Bum became the twenty-fifth "down and outer" to sit on the Mission's rough-hewn benches that night, and listen thoughtlessly to Mr. Remrofer talk about Cooperation. The twenty-five degenerates brightened only at the end of Mr. Remrofer's discourse, when his matronly wife passed out hamburgers, doughnuts and coffee. And though the discourse was excellent food for thought it was lost on the heterogeneous group because they needed food for the body more.

Oddly, perhaps paradoxically, enough, we often listen to our fellow associates talk about Mr. Remrofer's Cooperation. We, unlike the Starlight Mission group, are well-clothed and well-fed; our minds sharpened only by our own inquisitiveness (or dulled by the lack of it), but do we through our efforts indicate that we are more receptive to the appeal for united action than Big Jim? Cooperation stands high on the plateau of human endeavour; it is only possible where men have a group consciousness - where men realize that their particular field of specialization or activity is only a segment of the whole, not an entity within itself. Cooperation means work.

Cooperative action being what it is, of whom should we expect the most? Big Jim the Bum and his fellow degenerates or ourselves? Cooperation is the business of thoughtful, active men - men of no mean intellect. We, therefore, expect the most of you.
